Erich, over at Tactical Intelligence <sup>[2]</sup>, has put together a great video demonstrating a small but powerful stove. One of the basic principles of preparedness is thinking in terms of layers and back-ups. A stove like this, fueled by either charcoal or small amounts of wood, is a great back-up to your electric or gas stove. We haven't yet purchased any type of camp stove, but those are dependent on fuel, which may or may not be in plentiful supply in the future. Watch this video, and you'll understand why I just had to buy it!

If you decide this is a must-have, Erich has a discount code on his blog <sup>[3]</sup> for 5% off.
